MBTA police seek alleged exposer

Transit Police have released surveillance photographs of a man they say exposed his genitals while making lewd comments to passengers on the MBTA.

The man seen in the pictures is estimated to be about 21 years old. The incident happened on May 19, around 9:50 p.m., as a Red Line train traveled between North Quincy and Wollaston stations.

Transit Police regularly release surveillance footage of criminal suspects, particularly those suspected of sexual misconduct on the MBTA. METRO

Boston Bike Party: Cycle like a bike star

Night ride. Cyclists will set off on a two-hour ride through Boston tonight.

Hundreds of cyclists are gearing up for Boston's first "Bike Party" tonight, hopping on a nation-wide trend that is meant to pump up the cycling experience.

"When I moved to Boston a couple of months ago, I saw so many bikers, and the city is really nice, and has a lot of infrastructure for bicycles," said Boston Bike Party Organizer Elodie Garcia, 25. "So I just wanted to spread the fun."

Other cities' bike parties have had themes — like a Robot Ride in D.C. and a Rubik's Cube Ride in San Francisco — but tonight's will be pretty straightforward. Organizers collected song requests, and intend to lead the group by having cyclists follow the music.

Garcia, who is originally from France, said she was inspired by the similar Bike Party in D.C.

"I just loved it. It's a really nice feeling to be with other people on bikes. There is a spirit to try and be friendly with the cars. Even if I have to block traffic a little bit, we try to do it as fast as possible," she said.

If you go

Cyclists will meet at 7.30 p.m. at Dewey Square.

- The two-hour ride sets off at 8 p.m., and will take the group around South Boston and through the South End, with a pit stop at Castle Island.
- The ride comes to a halt on Boylston Street.
- The cruising speed is capped at 10 miles per hour.
- Partygoers may mingle.

As of last night, nearly 430 people had RSVPed on the event's Facebook page.

Since the ride will take place at night, Garcia said she plans to instruct participants to "ride safely."

"Wearing a helmet is better, and being friendly with other cars. We basically want to have a friendly bike culture for cyclists and [motorists]."

The party has the potential for success, in Garcia's opinion, which is why she thinks it will catch on. "It's a really open-minded event."

Hospital stint. Mayor Menino returning to hospital to have surgery

Mayor Thomas Menino, 70, will undergo surgery Friday at Brigham and Women's Hospital for an enlarged prostate.

"The elective surgery will take a few hours and require a few days in the hospital and some recovery at home," Menino Spokeswoman Dot Joyce said in a statement yesterday. "The Mayor ... wants to reassure everyone that he will be fine." The procedure will "correct a very common issue among men of his age," she said. METRO

Dirty water? Nope, state beaches make the grade

Catch some waves. Many of the beaches that are part of or near Boston Harbor earned good marks this year.

You don't have to worry about loving that dirty water to call Boston your home.

A recent beach rating gave high marks to the state's beaches for water quality and safety.

Save the Harbor/Save the Bay released on Sunday its second annual Beaches Report Card, which examined water quality and flagging accuracy throughout last year at Department of Conservation and Recreation managed beaches from Nahant to Hull.

Beaches in Revere and Winthrop scored the highest in the report with 100 percent safety ratings. M Street Beach, City Point and Carson Beach in South Boston scored a 99 percent rating. Part of the reason for the high ratings was last year's dry summer.

"Bacterial pollution is often caused by storm water discharges that accompany summer showers, squalls and storms, so less rain means cleaner water," said Bruce Berman of Save the Harbor/Save the Bay.

Memorial Day. Beverly cancels parade because elderly veterans can't go

On Memorial Day in Beverly, the city usually throws a parade to honor the men and women who fought and died for their country.

But this year was a little different.

The city's veteran services agent said the North Shore community's parade was canceled this year because of the difficulty older veterans had participating in the annual event, according to the Beverly Citizen.

Instead, an honor ceremony was held in observance of the day.

"This year will not be a parade as we usually have," Veterans Agent Jerry Guilebbe told the Beverly Citizen.

The news of the canceled parade angered some veterans who told WBZ that it sends the wrong message to current military members. METRO

Getaway. CapeFlyer makes maiden voyage from Boston to Cape Cod

Things went smoothly this weekend for CapeFlyer, a new train service that lets local tourists bypass traffic between Boston and Cape Cod, according to state transportation officials.

MassDOT did not have estimates last night on how many people took advantage of the rail line, which ran Friday through Monday from South Station to Hyannis, Mass. But, overall, travelers gave the weekend service a sunny review.

"I had a great time with tonight's ride. I see this growing in popularity quickly," CapeFlyer rider Brian Donovan said on the train's Facebook's page. "Will definitely use again."

Twitter was flooded with photos of customers enjoying the train's bar car, which serves beer, wine, Cape Codders and bloody marys, as well as some food.

Some complained about the train not keeping its schedule at times — which was a small price to pay for others, who blissfully boasted about zipping by 5-mile backups at the Bourne Bridge.

CapeFlyer will run through Labor Day. It's the first time in more than two decades that there will be rail service between Boston and Cape Cod. MORGAN ROUSSEAU

US urges garment buyers to keep tabs on Bangladesh labor

After the collapse of the Rana Plaza building in April, Western retailers are concerned with corruption and a lack of trained building inspectors. / GETTY IMAGES

Safety. A catastrophic factory collapse in Dhaka has focused global attention on workplace risks and regulations.

International garment buyers, particularly those in the United States, have a crucial role to play in ensuring the safety of Bangladesh's garment workers, a senior government official said yesterday.

"On the labor issue, absolutely — buyers have a critical role, and they must be engaged," U.S. Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs Wendy Sherman told a news conference in Dhaka, the Bangladeshi capital.

Western retailers and brands are struggling to assess safety risks at thousands of Bangladesh garment factories after the April 24 collapse of the Rana Plaza building in a Dhaka suburb that killed more than 1,100 people.

Their task is made tougher by a lack of robust safety rules, a severe shortage of trained building inspectors and equipment needed to make proper safety assessments and widespread concern about corruption.

Sherman said foreign companies should not give up on Bangladesh.

"We are encouraging international investors not to turn their back on Bangladesh, because the solution is reform, not withdrawal," she said.

"Ultimately, success will depend on the will and commitment of industry, government, civil society and everyday Bangladeshis to come together to change the culture of workplace safety and worker rights in Bangladesh," she added. REUTERS

Memorial Day. President pays tribute to the fallen during Arlington visit

President Barack Obama paid tribute to fallen men and women of the U.S. armed services during a Memorial Day ceremony in which he reminded Americans that the country was still at war.

During a solemn visit to Arlington National Cemetery, the resting ground for many military casualties, Obama noted in remarks to visitors that next year would mark the last Memorial Day of the U.S. war in Afghanistan.

"But even as we turn the page on a decade of conflict, even as we look forward, let us never forget, as we gather here today, that our nation is still at war," Obama said.

Unlike World War II or the Vietnam War, conflicts that touched nearly every American, most U.S. citizens were not directly affected by the conflicts overseas, the president noted. REUTERS

Terrorism

UN rights chief says anti-terror measures can backfire

United Nations human rights chief Navi Pillay told governments yesterday that trying to fight terrorism by limiting personal freedoms and mistreating suspects could only worsen the problem.

She spoke as Britain and France were considering tightening anti-terror laws and surveillance after the killings of two soldiers in London and Paris, and as U.S. President Barack Obama renewed his efforts to close the Guantanamo prison camp in Cuba.

Pillay said she had received allegations of "very grave violations of human rights that have taken place in the context of counter-terrorist and counterinsurgency operations." REUTERS

Cameron criticized as protests grow over UK soldier's murder

Rigby. The soldier was hacked to death in London by two men who said they killed him in the name of Islam.

Around a thousand far-right protesters shouting "Muslim killers, off our streets" marched through central London yesterday against a backdrop of swelling anti-Muslim feeling following the killing of a British soldier last week.

In a tense but largely peaceful demonstration, supporters of the far-right English Defence League rallied outside Prime Minister David Cameron's residence waving placards and shouting anti-Islamic obscenities.

"Islamic extremism is probably the No. 1 threat to Britain," said Ben Gates, a protester.

Another protester, Samuel Hames, said of Rigby: "He survived his tour of foreign lands and [came] home to his family — and what happened to him is disgusting."

Nearly 2,000 people marched at a similar demonstration in Newcastle on Saturday.

Two men were arrested overnight for throwing firebombs at an Islamic cultural center in Grimsby, in northeast England. Similar attacks were recorded last week.

As anti-racist groups warned that there could be more reprisals, Cameron came under intense pressure for going on vacation. Pictures of him relaxing in Ibiza prompted newspapers to question his leadership at a time of unease. REUTERS

New tech palaces: visionary HQs, or cursed trophies?

A model of Frank Gehry's new Facebook headquarters. / FACEBOOK

Campus. Tech companies construct their own buildings that match the way they work.

While much of corporate America is retrenching on the real estate front, the four most influential technology companies in America are each planning headquarters that could win a Pritzker Architecture Prize for hubris.

Amazon.com on Friday revealed plans for three verdant bubbles in downtown Seattle, joining Apple's circular "spaceship," Facebook's Frank Gehry-designed open-office complex and a new Googleplex on the list of planned trophy offices.

"It signals a desire, a statement, to say that we're special, we're different. We have changed the world and we are going to continue to change it," said Margaret O'Mara, associate professor of history at the University of Washington, who has written about the building of Silicon Valley.

"It's also a reflection of robust bank accounts. They have a lot of cash."

Historically, however, when a company becomes preoccupied with the grandeur of its premises, it often signals a high point in its fortunes.

These fantastical buildings may end up as little more than costly monuments to vanity and a loss of focus on the core business that made for success in the first place.

"I've been thinking the Apple spaceship is going to get nicknamed the 'Death Star' because the project is so big and the timing is so bad," said hedge fund manager Jeff Matthews of Ram Partners. The building is coming to fruition just as Apple's product cycles may be maturing, he explained.

"It is such a classic contrary indicator that you just get the shakes." He no longer holds Apple stock. REUTERS

Apple has the most ambitious idea, a 2.8-million-square-foot glass ring on 176 acres. It would be in part a monument to former CEO Steve Jobs.

Building a future

Elite design projects for tech companies

Amazon's design, presented to Seattle city planners last week, includes three steel and glass spheres almost 100 feet high, which will serve as the centerpiece for three new skyscrapers that will house a rapidly growing workforce in downtown Seattle.

Google Inc. has outgrown its original headquarters in Silicon Valley's Mountain View and is planning to build a 1.1 million square foot Googleplex nearby.

Called Bay View, it will have nine rectangular buildings, horizontally bent, with living roofs surrounded by courtyards and connected by bridges.

No employee will be more than a two-and-a-half-minute walk away from any colleague, a design aimed at encouraging collaboration. A Google spokeswoman declined further comment.

BOSTON WATER AND SEWER COMMISSION
2013 ANNUAL NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS

The Boston Water and Sewer Commission (BWSC) annually provides its customers with information about meter reading, billing, service termination and customer rights. This is a summary of the information contained in the 2013 Annual Notice which can be viewed in its entirety at www.bwsc.org or requested by contacting the Commission's Customer Service Department at (617) 989-7800. The Commission's Billing, Termination and Appeal Regulations can also be found on the Commission's website or by contacting the Customer Services Department at (617) 989-7800.

AUTOMATED METER READINGS. Water meters are read daily by BWSC's automated meter reading system and are used to calculate water consumption for billing purposes. If a meter reading cannot be obtained, your account will be billed using an estimated meter reading based on previous usage and will be adjusted automatically when an actual meter reading is obtained.

METER TESTING. Meter tests are available upon request. All meter tests are performed according to accuracy standards set by the American Water Works Association. For information on meter test fees or to request a meter test, contact the BWSC Customer Service Department at (617) 989-7800.

WATER METERS. BWSC maintains a program for the replacement of broken, missing or damaged water meters and meter transmission units. For more information, contact the BWSC Customer Service Department at (617) 989-7800.

REFUNDS. If you have a credit on your bill, you may have the amount applied to future bills, transferred to another account, or request a refund. For more information, contact the BWSC Customer Service Department at (617) 989-7800.

PAYMENT PLANS. If you need more time to pay your bill, contact the BWSC Collections Department at (617) 989-7070 to make arrangements for a payment plan. For accounts scheduled for termination, payment must be in the form of certified funds.

ELDERLY/DISABLED PERSON DISCOUNTS. Homeowners 65 years of age or older or fully disabled home-owners living in one to four family homes are eligible for a 25% discount on the water portion of the bill only. For more information regarding eligibility requirements, contact the BWSC Customer Service Department at (617) 989-7800.

RIGHT TO DISPUTE YOUR BILL. If you believe your bill is wrong, you must notify the BWSC within 30 days of the billing date for which the dispute is claimed. For further information regarding filing a dispute, contact the BWSC Customer Service Department at (617) 989-7800.

TERMINATION OF WATER SERVICE. Your water service may be terminated if your bill is at least sixty (60) days past due and has a delinquent balance of over $250. For further information contact the BWSC Customer Service Department at (617) 989-7800 or Collections Department at (617) 989-7070.

RIGHTS TO SERVICE. Provided there are no violations of BWSC regulations, BWSC will not terminate water service to an owner-occupied property when the property owner or a direct family member is seriously ill and certifies that a financial hardship exists. Similarly, water service to homes occupied entirely by individuals over the age of 65 will not be terminated if a documented financial hardship exists. For further information regarding eligibility requirements contact BWSC Collections Department at 617-989-7070.

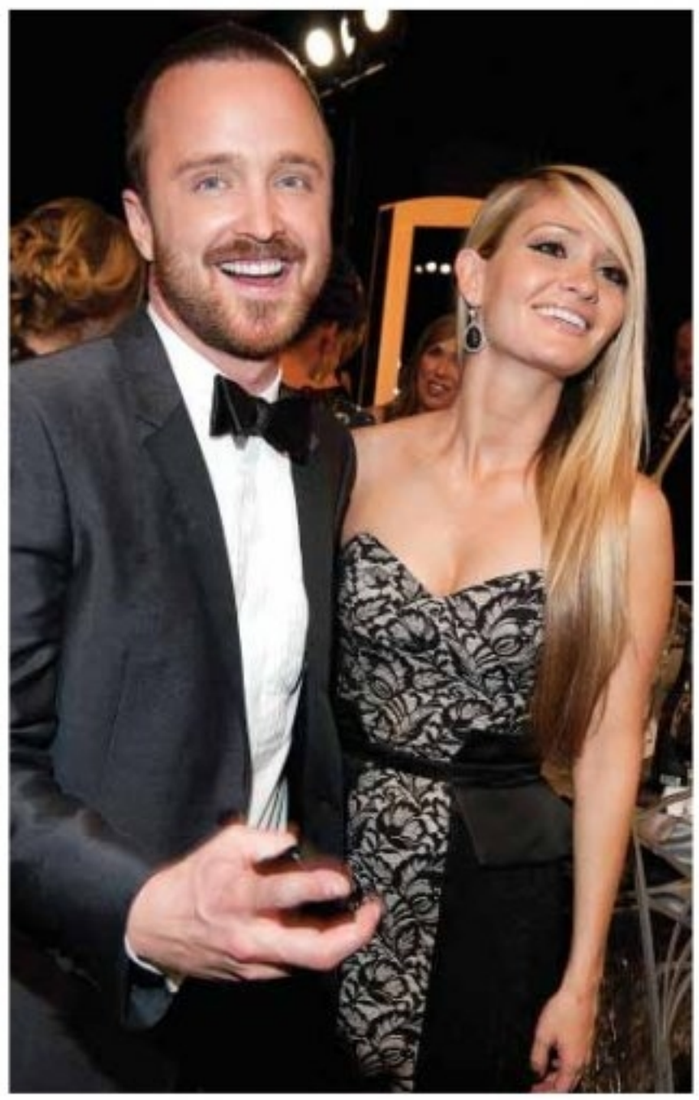
Scarlett Johansson as Hillary Clinton?

The casting call to portray Hillary Rodham Clinton in a new biopic about her life is looking pretty ferocious (and attractive). Reese Witherspoon, Scarlett Johansson, Amanda Seyfried and Jessica Chastain are among the actresses vying to play the secretary of state in "Rodham," a new film that will focus on the early years of Clinton's marriage and her time as a 20-something lawyer in Washington, D.C.

"They're all wonderful actresses," director James Ponsoldt told The Independent. "We're very fortunate that a lot of really great actors are interested in playing these roles. ...You don't find people who question the quality of her intelligence or her drive," he continued. "I want a wonderful actress who could embody that."

Not to knock Clinton (she's regal) but this is probably the first time Scarlett Johansson and Hillary Clinton have been mentioned in relation to one another — ever.



Aaron Paul gushes about new wife

"Breaking Bad" star Aaron Paul is the most romantic actor out there — at least on social media. Before he walked down the aisle with his fiance Lauren Parsekian on Sunday in Malibu, he tweeted their photo, saying: "And so it begins." And on the morning after, he Instagrammed a picture of the two of them from their wedding night with this promise: "A day will never go by without me reminding you how special you are. Thanks for last night my pretty little bird."

Talking points

Polanski needs a meeting with Steinem, stat

Roman Polanski isn't necessarily a fan of birth control, complaining during a press conference in Cannes for his new film, "Venus in Fur," that the Pill has had a "masculinizing" effect on women. The 79-year-old director says the Pill has "changed the place of women in our times." He also gripes that moves toward gender equality are having a negative impact on chivalry, noting that "offering flowers to a lady" has now become "indecent." Polanski's wife, Emmanuelle Seigner, stars in "Venus in Fur" as an actress dominating her director during auditions for a play.

Stewart, meanwhile, was caught off-guard by a swarm of paparazzi in a parking garage this weekend and responded with a pair of middle fingers.

Amanda Bynes departs Manhattan Central Booking after being arrested on Friday on charges of reckless endangerment, tampering with evidence and criminal possession of marijuana after she allegedly threw her bong out of her apartment window. /ALO CEBALLOS, GETTY IMAGES

Where is Amanda Bynes' family?

It was all fun and games with Amanda Bynes until she showed up to her court hearing in this wig. That wig is a cry for help. So what's going on? The more apt question is: What isn't?

This Memorial Day weekend was such a busy one for the star, it's hard to keep all of the crazy straight. She first showed up in court like this on Friday morning after being arrested for throwing a bong out of her New York City apartment window earlier that morning.

She then spent the weekend tweeting various allegations that the NYPD sexually assaulted her. She peppered this with tweets to Rihanna with the shocking, "Chris Brown beat you because you're not pretty enough." She followed that up with, "I almost named my new dog Rihanna." She later deleted all posts related to the singer.

On Monday, she looped back around to her NYPD allegations, stating that she is suing the NYPD for other various things related to the arrest, including bringing her to a mental hospital and locking her up overnight "for coming home after a facial and working out with my trainer like the good girl that I am." She concluded by encouraging the public to anticipate another nose job and her impending career "as a singer/rapper!"

I know a certain female singer from Barbados who probably won't be making any cameos on Bynes' forthcoming album.

Some major 'Development' on Netflix

You know them as Tobias, George Michael, Maeby, Lucille, Michael and Lindsay, respectively, but they're really David Cross, Michael Cera, Alia Shawkat, Jessica Walter, Jason Bateman and Portia de Rossi. / JESSE GRANT/GETTY IMAGES

Welcome back. Upon the Bluth family's return this past weekend, cast members discuss plots and jokes so intricate that even they didn't get them right away.

Although it's hard to pinpoint precisely why "Arrested Development" failed to connect with many viewers during its initial three-season run, it seems likely that one reason was the show's narrative density. While its main thrust was chronicling Michael Bluth's efforts to corral his wildly dysfunctional family, the series featured countless plot lines that slowly shifted into focus thanks to asides and ever-evolving references that rewarded returning fans over sporadic viewership.

Now that the show is back, creator Mitch Hurwitz spared no effort in creating 15 new episodes as complex as their predecessors. And the show's cast is quick to observe that even they struggled to wrap their heads around dialogue that might be meaningful in as many as three or four different ways.

"I'll try to explain it clearly, but it will come out probably really confusing," says Michael Cera. "But there was one scene that was like a five-page scene in the computer lab, and different sections of this scene would appear in different episodes. So you'd be actually having to deliver a line that made sense in multiple, different contexts that actually play against each other, and we'd have to deliver it in a way that tries to work for all three of those. And then you'd see an episode and you have different information and it means something totally different."

Portia de Rossi insists that the structure of the episodes — which follow just one character's point of view — should actually be easier to understand.

"It's easier to digest than the original series, because we were following storylines A, B, C, D, E and F," she says. "Now, we're just following this one character, so in a way it's easier to watch, and we've got a little bit more time to tell the story."

What seems to excite the cast the most is creating something that seems largely unlike anything else on television.

David Cross, the feckless Tobias, says that audiences will love the experience, but that it may take a little getting used to.

"You're going to realize, 'There's a structure to this that I wasn't aware of when I started watching,'" he says. "That's going to make everybody triple-excited, and there's going to be a sense of discovery to it that I think will be really exciting, and really define what TV can do."

TODD GILCHRIST

Bateman abides

The one son who had no choice but to keep them all together

Jason Bateman remains a unifying presence, despite the fact that only two episodes focus on Michael.. He says Netflix gave Hurwitz more freedom.

"I hope that's appreciated by the few people who do love the show," he says. "They seem to be a group who likes things somewhat challenging. And the fact that Netflix affords [Mitch] the opportunity to have these stories go out over 15 different episodes, that are so intertwined that the same scene will repeat, from different angles, in multiple episodes, is a really unique and exciting thing to be a part of, in working with his complexity and with Netflix's distribution platform."

Smells — and reads like — 'American Spirit'

MARIA LILJA

Dan Kennedy is known to legions of fans of "The Moth" as host of its weekly podcast, a medium where truth is held in high regard and fictionalizing is frowned upon. But after a 2008 memoir ("Rock On: An Office Power Ballad"), Kennedy is making his first foray into fiction. "American Spirit" follows the 40-something Matthew as his life slowly unravels. Kennedy says he could maybe relate to the character — but just maybe.

Why is the mid-life crisis so fascinating?
I suppose because it really doesn't matter who you are or what you do. When it occurs to you that you may, in the best-case scenario, be at the halfway done with your life [point], it tends to grab your attention. Having said that, I guess we never know what the halfway point is. History is full of people who didn't realize they were middle aged at 14, you know? Have I started the interview on a positive note? Hey, where's everybody going? Hello?

How was switching from non-fiction and essays to developing a novel?
I am a huge fan of true stories onstage. But I hit a point in writing where I just wasn't fond of dragging friends and loved ones into print for the sake of a laugh and a few bucks to eat on. At a certain point, you're having a nice weekend with someone, and something funny or weird happens, and you can see them thinking: "Jesus, don't tell me Shakespeare here is gonna throw me into his next little essay."

Is 40-something Matthew based on anyone?
As for Matthew, he's a guy who can't figure out what to do when his job is gone, his marriage is doomed, the money's running out fast again, he's drinking in suburban grocery store parking lots, eating hallucinogens and decongestants and then burning frequent flier miles flying around the world making a bigger mess of things for himself. ... I've, uh, never known anyone like him.

Bret Michaels revs up for debut of his RV show

Open road. The rockin' reality star wants to pimp your ride.

After decades in the spotlight as a glam metal frontman, 50-year-old rocker reality star Bret Michaels is throwing a new skill into the mix: tricking out RVs and rocking the open road.

For Michaels, RVing is much more than a means of transportation — it's a lifestyle. The rock star holds tight to countless childhood memories in an RV and now spends nine months out of the year on the road, logging millions of miles.

Sunday night, the self-proclaimed "ultimate RV adventurer" debuted a new show on the Travel Channel, "Rock my RV with Bret Michaels." In the 16-episode series, the "Rock of Love" star leads a design team as they transform worn-out, dilapidated RVs into the most luxurious, over-the-top, tricked-out mobile mansions on the road. To get America revved up, the hands-on aficionado has five things he wants you to know about hitting the road in an RV.

They're not just the chariot of choice for retirees

Anyone at any age can rock an RV road trip.

"I hope that [the show] shows that the open road is for any generation. My mom and dad were pretty young when they were doing it. It's sort of like the Wild West. You go out there, and it's a great adventure," he says.

Be mindful of the cramped quarters

"When you take a road trip, whether you're in a car or an RV, let me just assure you, you're either going to bond for life and have great memories, or you may possibly never speak to each other again. This is my best advice: You want as much space as you can get. Stop at a place where you can get out of that thing and get away from each other for a little bit. Go out, walk around, hike, stretch out, enjoy the scenery."

This is the kind of scenery that Bret Michaels — whose new show airs Sundays at 9 p.m. on the Travel Channel — is used to. / GETTY IMAGES

Bigger is not better

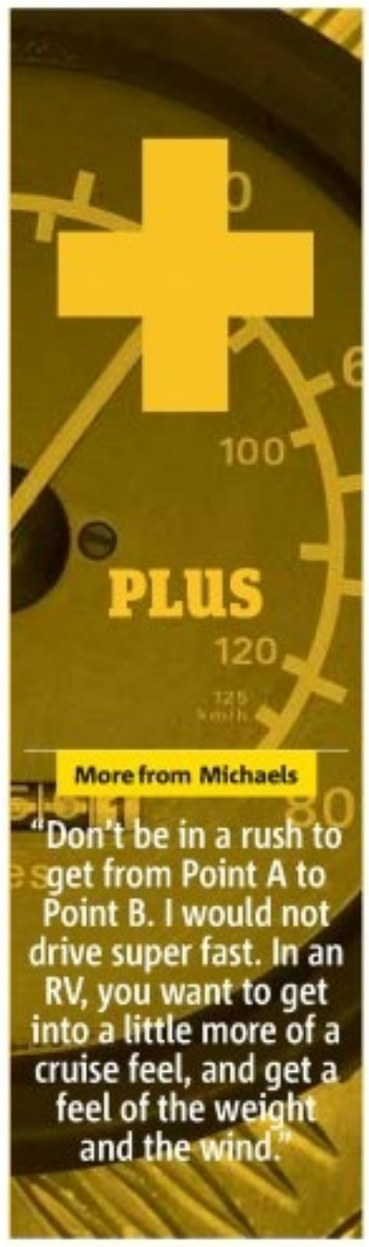
"If you're going to start RVing, you might want to start with a smaller one and get a good feel of the groove of the road as you're going. It's just like starting out on anything. If you're going to ride a Harley, you don't want to jump on the biggest, heaviest one right away. You graduate up a little bit."

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan.rousseau@metro.us

Every RV has its thorn

He takes tricking out your RV seriously

"The first thing I have to do with most of these is look at the structure, the rust factor, what we can and can't do — and most important is weight. You can't put too much weight on this thing. It could be quite dangerous. So it's really a matter of function and fun. I've got to create both. I want it to be fun, but it's got to function, and I want their experience when they leave to be enjoyable. A lot of these RV shows, they build these in a garage, and they make things that could never possibly go down the road. My job is to make it be able to go wherever they want it — go under any bridge, go anywhere they want, any beach, any side of a mountain that they want to go."



PLUS
More from Michaels
"Don't be in a rush to get from Point A to Point B. I would not drive super fast. In an RV, you want to get into a little more of a cruise feel, and get a feel of the weight and the wind."

BREAKING 'FREE': HOW TO MAKE IT AS A FREELANCER

There are many paths to building a successful career, but for those who have the drive, it can be worth it to break free and try being a freelancer. In fact, Intuit, a website that helps guide small businesses, predicts that by 2020, 40 percent of America's workforce will be freelancers. oDesk, the world's largest online workplace, predicts that by 2020, one in three workers will be hired online — allowing them to work wherever and whenever they want.

Based on a new study from my company and oDesk, we found that 72 percent of employees want to quit their traditional jobs to be entirely independent, and 61 percent say that they likely will within two years. We discovered that freedom is the top reason why they want to quit. They want to put the "free" in their career and become a freelancer. Here are three tips on how to freelance successfully.

Become an expert

Put all of your energy into becoming the top expert in your field so that people seek you out, and you can win new business. For instance, you could become a top Ruby on Rails programmer in your niche or an expert on using LinkedIn to generate leads. This way, people can quickly identify you. It's easier to find freelance positions if you have a focus area.

Career advice

DAN SCHAWBEL

DANSCHAWBEL.COM

Dan Schawbel is the founder of Millennial Branding and the author of "Promote Yourself: The New Rules For Career Success" (St. Martin's Press).

Create a strong Web presence

If people can't find you, they can't hire you. Make sure you have a website, a blog and profiles both on freelancing sites (such as oDesk, for example) and on social networks like Twitter and Facebook. On your website, you should include your portfolio, your résumé, testimonials, a list of your services and links to your profiles for online workplaces. This will highlight work you've done and prove to employers that you have valuable skills. On your social profiles, you should post tips and resources that will benefit others, because the more information you have, the more new customers you will get.

Quoted

It's easier to find freelance positions if you have a focus area.

Innovate

Think like an entrepreneur

You are your own business, and you have to always keep that in mind. This includes constantly networking, learning and coming up with creative ways to sell yourself. Your skills today might not be worth as much in the future, so you have to learn to adapt and change. Learn new skills and seek opportunities before others have a chance to.

Freelancing requires a lot of drive and initiative — think like an entrepreneur and build your brand. / GETTY IMAGES

Staying healthy at the office

You may claim that your job is killing you. And the truth is, it could actually be harming you.

Poor lunch decisions when you're on the go, uncomfortable chairs, and germy work stations might be taking a toll on your immune system. With a few thoughtful workplace changes, though, you can make your office a place of health and not harm.

If you work in an office, you probably spend the majority of your day at your desk. Make sure it isn't a breeding ground for bacteria. "Sanitize your workspace," suggests life coach Stacia Pierce of Ultimate Lifestyle Enterprises. "Keep disinfectant wipes nearby to wipe down your mouse, keyboard and phone." In other words, don't just expect the nighttime cleaning crew to get rid of all those lurking germs.

Keeping yourself healthy at work can be a balancing act. / GETTY IMAGES

Pierce also suggests getting fresh air by eating lunch outside whenever possible. Kathy Gruver, a health and wellness practitioner, agrees. "Get outside for fresh air and sunlight, which can help [with] that after-lunch feeling of sleepiness," says Gruver. "Add in exercise and stretching throughout the day. We are still when waiting for things to load, fax and copy. This is the perfect time to stretch and move the body."

You might be surprised which careers offer the healthiest lifestyles. According to Leslie Caccamese, director of strategic marketing and research at Great Place to Work, grocery clerks are often in good shape. "At Whole Foods, team members are educated on healthy eating so they can share that information with their customers," says Caccamese. "Team members also get an extra discount at Whole Foods stores for maintaining healthy biometric standards. Their annual Green Trek Challenge awards team members points and prizes for eating healthy, exercising and choosing alternative forms of transportation."

JULIA WEST

'Work'-ing out

Exercise

Find ways to sneak a little exercise into your workday. Get your blood flowing with a few lunges or heel lifts at your work station. If you're shy about the desk workout routine, burn calories more discreetly by parking farther away from the building or opting for the stairs rather than the elevator. Or just go for a walk during your lunch break.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Any venture you undertake could turn out to be more dynamic than anticipated. Play things carefully, because you might have a tiger by the tail.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. The key to your success will be your selfless attitude. If you're willing to go all out for people, they, in return, will knock themselves out for you.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Be as amicable and outgoing as you can today. Relationships you establish in your current cycle will blossom into enduring friendships.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. The rewards you've been anticipating are on the way. Outside events are what have been holding you back, and circumstances have been shifting in your favor.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. A career opportunity that could be bigger than anything you thought possible could come your way. Be ready to take advantage of it with alacrity.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Friends will be looking out for your interests, and they will make things happen for you that you could never do on your own. Be sure to show the proper gratitude.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. You might be able to increase your rate of progress if you raise the number of your ambitions. There's no law that says you can only pursue one thing at a time.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. If you're a member of a club or organization, and you're asked to fill a particular post or position, do it. It could lead to something big.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Before you move on to a new enterprise, be sure you've gotten all that you can from your old ones. There could be some hidden payoffs.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Positive changes are afoot, especially regarding an area in which you are highly skilled. It's time to put all your knowledge to use.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Proceed with cautious optimism when it comes to your career. You could become enormously lucky, but you'll still need to tread carefully.

The truth is out there... just not in print

Re: "Senators who opposed Sandy bill accept disaster aid" (Metro, May 23) The real reason that Oklahoma's two Republican senators voted against the $60 billion supplemental appropriation bill that provided relief to victims of Hurricane Sandy was that this bill contained a lot of unnecessary pork barrel spending unrelated to Hurricane Sandy relief. These two senators are true fiscal conservatives who are against pork barrel spending, which our nation cannot afford with our record debt and deficits. Report the entire facts or do not report the story at all.

Whatever helps

Re: "'Bachelorette' star on her alcoholism" (Metro, May 23) Your blurb about Meredith Phillips's 150 days of sobriety was flip and indifferent toward the daily pressures that alcoholics face in order to stay clean. If a People Magazine cover helps someone reach their first or even their 151st day of sobriety, then I'm all for it. CHIP GOINES, VIA EMAIL

Don't give them fame

The recent news about the U.K. soldier who was attacked and killed by the alleged terrorist should never have been released by the media and shown to the whole world. The video showing that terrorist means we are complying with exactly what he wanted to be shown to the whole world. And that makes his mission completely satisfying to his intentions, and also encourages the others to follow suit — very bad!

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Cardinals (32-17)

An impressive 4-2 week has moved the Cardinals to the top of Metro's power rankings. Pitching and defense was the theme of the week as they gave up an average of just 2.5 runs per game. With a win on Friday, starter Lance Lynn improved to 7-1 on the year. The Cardinals are wrapping up an eight-game road trip, which ends today in Kansas City.

No. 2

Rangers (32-17)

Texas dropped two of three to the Athletics at home last week, including a Yu Darvish start, thus the reason for their drop. They still have the best pitching the American League has to offer, posting a 3.44 ERA, tops in the AL as of Sunday. Texas is in the midst of a stretch of 12 of 16 games away from home.

No. 3

Braves (30-19)

Winning eight of nine going into yesterday will allow you to move into the top three. The Braves beat up on lowly competition in the Dodgers, Twins and Mets, but did it in convincing fashion, outscoring teams 49-25 in that stretch.

No. 4

Yankees (30-19)

The big news coming out of the Bronx last week involved yet another big-name injury as Curtis Granderson fractured his pinkie finger Friday night and is expected to miss at least four weeks. The team is tied for first place in the AL East and is getting set for a Subway Series with the Mets to start the week.

No. 5

Reds (31-19)

After winning five in a row, one would have thought the Reds would have taken over first place, but they are in the same division as the Cards, so second place will have to do. The Reds have an intriguing matchup with Cleveland this week.

No. 6

Pirates (31-19)

The surprise Pirates are hanging tough in the loaded NL Central. Going into yesterday, Pittsburgh had won five of its last six games with pitching and defense the key, holding opponents to two runs or less in that stretch. Pirate teams have started seasons strong in the past, but eventually have fallen off. It's another "wait and see" situation in Pittsburgh.

- No. 9 Indians (27-22)

Depression medication may have improved your condition.

Everywhere but in the bedroom.

Consider our clinical research study.

Many commonly prescribed antidepressant medications can have sexual side effects resulting in a lack of interest in sex, lack of arousal, or an inability to reach orgasm. We are conducting a clinical research study to better understand the effects on sexual functioning of an investigational medication when compared with an approved medication.

You may be eligible to participate if you:

- Are 18-55 years old
- Are currently taking Celexa® (citalopram), Paxil® (paroxetine) or Zoloft® (sertaline) and your depression is well controlled
- Are experiencing sexual side effects thought to be caused by your antidepressant medication

At the first study visit we will also review your medical history and other criteria to see if you are eligible for participation. All study-related office visits, medical examinations, psychological assessments and study medications will be provided at no cost to qualified participants. You may also receive compensation for your time and travel.

Have you been diagnosed with

PARKINSON'S DISEASE?

If you are over the age of 40, with no alcohol or drug dependence, you might be eligible to participate in this research study.

This study examines a method of non-invasive brain stimulation called Transcranial Direct Current Stimulation (tDCS) combined with Transcranial Ultrasound (TUS) and their effect on the symptoms of Parkinson's Disease.

Study visits will be conducted at Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital in Boston, MA, and will require 17 visits (1.5 – 2 hours each) over an 11-week period.

Compensation is $25 per visit

B's-Penguins a soap opera on ice

Jaromir Jagr has four assists and zero goals in 12 postseason games this year with the Bruins. / GETTY IMAGES

NHL playoffs.
There are storylines aplenty in this year's Stanley Cup Eastern Conference Finals.

In many ways, the NHL events that took place on March 27 and 28 make this 2013 Eastern Conference Finals between the Bruins and Penguins now seem almost predetermined.

A few days before the league trade deadline, it appeared that Flames forward and future Hall of Famer Jarome Iginla would be flipped to Boston, except at the last minute he chose the Penguins instead. That meant Bruins prospect and defensemen Matt Bartkowski (a Pittsburgh native and Penguins fan growing up) would stay with Boston and the B's later traded for former Penguins great Jaromir Jagr, who was then in Dallas. Iginla (four goals, eight assists this postseason) has been better than both Jagr (four assists) and Bartkowski (one goal, one assist) combined, but the Bruins found a way to win two rounds in the playoffs with each guy playing a decent sized role.

Jagr had 439 career goals when he was a superstar in Pittsburgh from 1990 to 2001 and had 65 goals in the playoffs over those 11 seasons in the Steel City. Given his recent struggles scoring the puck, the B's are hoping Jagr may get an adrenaline boost against the Pens, playing against a city that he once owned.

The Penguins have been the top team in the Eastern Conference all season so the fact that they reached this stage is less than surprising given their abundance of world-class talent in Sidney Crosby (seven goals, eight assists), Evgeni Malkin (four goals, 12 assists), Kris Letang (three goals, 13 assists) and James Neal (six goals, four assists) among others. After eliminating the Rangers last Saturday, Bruins forward Milan Lucic even went so far as to compare the Penguins to the Miami Heat, given that their roster is flooded with big-name talent.

Former Bruins center Marc Savard has never officially hung up his skates and he's only 35 years old, but Penguins enforcer Matt Cooke effectively ended his career on March 7, 2010, with a vicious blow to the head (that somehow went unpunished by the NHL) in a game at Consol Energy Center. The B's never really responded to Cooke's dirty play and though now is certainly not the time to mete out justice three years later, it's another interesting sidebar in this series. Cooke (three assists, 18 penalty minutes) has a much bigger role on the Penguins now than he did then.

Quest for the Cup

The Bruins and Penguins are set to tangle beginning later this week. With the Western Conference semifinals still taking place, the NHL had yet to announce the dates and times for the Boston-Pittsburgh series as of yesterday afternoon.

- The Bruins enjoyed an off-day on Memorial Day, save for injured defenseman Andrew Ference. Ference worked out with team trainers at TD Garden yesterday and head coach Claude Julien said that Ference has been skating again in recent days. Boston will have a major roster decision to make in the coming days if Ference is ready to go for a portion of the team's Eastern Conference Finals series against Pittsburgh. Both Torey Krug and Matt Bartkowski have contributed greatly.

Director, Teaching and Research in Education Outcomes Assessment

The Center for Continuing Education in the Health Sciences (CCEHS) and the Department of Medicine, Dartmouth-Hitchcock, are seeking a Director for Teaching and Research in Education Outcomes Assessment to teach health sciences research methods and direct multidisciplinary program evaluation research, with a focus on education outcomes. Successful grant writing, both state and federal, is expected. This is a two year position. The individual will receive an appropriate academic appointment as a member of the faculty of the Geisel School of Medicine at Dartmouth.

Qualifications: PhD or EdD in education program evaluation, human development, education, or a related field with extensive training in quantitative or qualitative research methods is required and a minimum of 10 years of experience in teaching, research, evaluation and administration.
